

Nasdaq 100 Daily Update Tuesday 28th January 2025

Nasdaq 100 Fundamental Analysis:

The Nasdaq 100 has fallen heavily at the start as this week, led lower by a 17% fall in Nvidia stock which wiped around $580 billion from the companies value. The catalyst was concerns over Chinese AI start up DeepSeek's ability to compete with the likes of OpenAI but at a lower cost, using less advanced chips. The index opened on Monday at the highs of 21,769 and fell immediately, eventually hitting a low at 20,766 before recovering some of the losses to trade around 21,200.

Looking forward, there are several events for traders to focus on that could continue the volatility in the Nasdaq 100, especially given the fragile recovery from yesterday's lows. The Fed Interest Rate Decision is on Wednesday at 1900 GMT, and this is followed by the Press Conference led by Chairman Powell at 1930 GMT. No change on rates is expected, so what the Chairman says regarding his thoughts on the potential for another rate cut in the first half of 2025 will be important. Later on Wednesday, Tesla, Microsoft and Meta release their earnings, with Apple releasing theirs on Thursday after the market close. Expectations are high so there could be room for disappointment, especially if the path of earnings growth is slower, relative to other quarters. After Monday's moves, traders will also be focused on updates on AI related spending and revenue generation.

Nasdaq 100 Technical Analysis:

Daily Analysis:

Monday's sharp sell-off tested support at 20694 which is the low from January 13th. This level giving way across the rest of the week would expose the next support at 20522 (38% retrace Aug/Dec upside), then potentially even 20009 (Oct 31st low).

To the upside, breaks above resistance at 21439 (mid-average) suggest tests of 21631 (62% retrace latest sell-off), even 21895 (Jan 5th high) are possible again.
